Odyssey available via the Cloud

Avia (AIM: AVIA), the AIM-listed developer and provider of clinical decision support systems, is pleased to announce that Odyssey clinical content is now available via the Cloud.

The Odyssey clinical content and business logic is now available via the Microsoft Azure Cloud platform, enabling customers and users in countries and regions with connectivity through the internet to enjoy the benefits of Odyssey clinical content with a significant reduction in the cost of deployment.

In addition, delivering the clinical content via the Cloud supported by the Odyssey web services will enable our strategic partners, resellers and end users to access the clinical content and business logic from any internet connected location in the world. This will increase our partner opportunities and reduce the time taken to deploy updates to the end user.

These developments will help to further open up the international markets for Avia's clinical decision support solutions and will create new opportunities for Avia's various Odyssey products. Odyssey is now available on CD and via the internet, 3G and the Cloud, for both static and mobile touchscreen and keyboard devices for use by clinicians and non-clinicians.

Barry Giddings, Executive Chairman of Avia, commented:

"The availability of Odyssey via the Cloud is another exciting step forward for Avia, increasing the number of vertical markets and geographies in which Odyssey can be deployed in both developed and developing environments. With this increased accessibility and the proven ability of our software to improve the efficiency of clinical resources and reduce risk, we believe Avia is well-positioned to meet the increasing global need for access to healthcare."
